Laptop performances by Bernhard Gál

[Audio-CD 'relive', Gromoga Records, Austria 2008]

In addition to his work as a composer and installation artist, Bernhard Gál also performs live, using a laptop computer along with additional electronic devices. Gál's solo concerts are comprised of elements from recent music and art projects as well as new field recordings, which he takes apart and reassembles in a quasi-improvised, live context. In many cases, the performances also reflect the respective concert venue, with its distinctive acoustic and sociocultural characteristics. Since 2002, Gál has given around 200 concerts on five continents and has worked in ongoing collaborations with other musicians, e.g. with Kai Fagaschinski, Jennifer Walshe, Tung Chao-Ming and Belma Beslic-Gál. In 2008, the audio CD relive was released on Gromoga Records, being the first 'official' audio documentation of Gal's laptop performances. Recently, he has also started presenting audio fragments from his latest cd release same difference in a live context. Furthermore, Gal continues to present performances and installations of the intermedia project textur, a series of audio-visual works combining phonography and photography.
